

This week marked the Field Staff Training for the NORTHERN CHEYENNE NEEDS ASSESSMENT

The Northern Cheyenne data collection team, including Ben Armentrout and 10 local Field Staff, met alongside Big Water Consulting for two days to gear up for the crucial household survey data collection phase of the Needs Assessment. The field team spent time learning about the project's significance and got hands-on training with the data collection software.

The Needs Assessment aims to gather crucial data about the households and residents on the Reservation. This information will empower the Tribe and our communities not only to secure funding, plan strategically, and enhance access to vital services, but help correct the story told about the people and families on the Reservation.

Official data collection kicked off on August 21st and will run until the end of October.

Congratulations to the dedicated field staff!
